Commitment

The Company will prevent illegal working while treating all applicants consistently and without discrimination. Checks are completed before employment starts for every prospective employee, regardless of nationality, race or ethnic origin.

Permitted check routes

- Home Office online right-to-work service using the applicant-provided share code and date of birth.
- Identity Document Validation Technology through an approved identity service provider for eligible British and Irish citizens, while the employer remains responsible for the check.
- A compliant manual check of original acceptable documents where the prescribed route permits.
- Employer Checking Service and Positive Verification Notice where required.

Three-step manual check

- Obtain the original acceptable document in the presence of the holder.
- Check that photographs, dates, names, restrictions and document integrity are reasonably consistent with the holder and the proposed work.
- Make a clear copy in a non-alterable format, record the date of check and retain securely for the duration of employment plus two years.

Online check procedure

- Use the official GOV.UK service; confirm the image and biographical details match the individual.
- Confirm the permission permits the proposed type and hours of work.
- Save the profile page showing the date of the check in a secure HR file.
- Schedule a repeat check before time-limited permission expires.

Follow-up, TUPE and changes

Time-limited permission is diarised with reminders. No worker continues after permission expires unless a valid application/check creates an applicable statutory excuse. TUPE checks will follow current Home Office guidance. Suspected fraud is escalated; documents are not retained beyond what is necessary.

Non-discrimination and data protection

Recruitment decisions will not be based on assumptions about nationality or accent. The same process applies to all. Information is limited to authorised staff, stored securely and used only for lawful employment compliance.
